Allen, Joel Asaph 1838-1921
19 July 1838-29 Aug. 1921; b,Springfield, MA d,Cornwall on Hudson, NY

Allen grew up laboring on his parents’ farm near Springfield, MA, where he became interested in natural history, especially birds. He attended Wilbraham Academy to which, in 18, he sold his collections to finance moving to Cambridge to be a special student of Louis Agassiz in 1862. He accompanied Agassiz on his Brazilian expedition. He took care of the birds and mammals in the Museum of Comparative Zoology and served as assistant in ornithology from 1871 to 1885 when he left for the American Museum of Natural History due to financial exigencies in the MCZ.

We was one of the founders of the Nuttall Ornithological Club and of the American Ornithological Union and was long-term editor of their publications, the Bulletin and the Auk. AOU

Anthony moved to Cincinnati in 1834 and pursued a career as a businessman. By 1835 he had taken up the study of shells, writing articles largely on freshwater molluscs, dealing in shells, and corresponding with naturalists in the U. S. and abroad. He was noticed by Louis Agassiz, who brought him to Cambridge in 1863 as curator of the Museum of Comparative Zoology's conchology collection.
